CASA DEL BEN-ESSERE, MILAN

The Home of Well-Being designed by Paolo Bodega Architettura is a residential unit measuring 80 square metres built using an industrialised construction technology involving use of big concrete panels in compliance with the concepts of energy efficiency, technology, home automation, environmental sustainability and quality.

The initiative, promoted by Fumagalli Edilizia Industrializzata, GranitiFiandre and Iris Ceramica with the support of the Health Councilorship of the City of Milan, was built in "Indro Montanelli" gardens in Milan and inaugurated with a convention focusing on the theme "New trends in social housing".

The exhibition, which continues until July 4 2010, demonstrates to visitors that it really is possible to live in a home which is physically and psychologically healthful as well as comfortable, environmentally sustainable and high in technical and technological quality.

The principles of health and hygiene inspiring the project also determined the colours of the building's external cladding, for which Paolo Bodega Architettura chose Taxos Extra, a marble in ethereal hues in 150x75 cm slabs included in the Active Clean Air & Antibacterial Ceramic™ range of anti-pollutant, antibacterial materials by Graniti Fiandre.
